

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Since I have signed up for the state's protection, I receive 1-2 calls a week as compared to 12-15 a week before signing up. With this reduction in "junk" calls coming in, I now find my family spending more time at home. Don't do anything different that would allow businesses to bother me any more. If I wanted their service, I would look into getting it myself. I don't need them to call me and tell me about it. It's as bad as pop-ups on the internet. At least there are programs to buy that stop those. In Indiana, there is only the law and it works. Don't change it.
